BIEN OU BIEN ?

11.06 - 31.07.2014

Freedom - as defined by Max Stirner - to be truly such, cannot derive neither depend on a third-party concession. It should be solely the outcome of a self-conquest just as it is exactly for the uniqueness and, finally, for the property.

MonChéri: property. Singular, in this case made with Galerie Valentin and Jeanroch Dard. The uniqueness in question does not emphasize union itself, but rather the strength of the bond that seeks its own high standards.

As a result of its selection, the active principles of «this new property» are different and unusual, and they are oblique to the smooth correlations that develop between the multiple artworks exhibited. These elements aim to move towards the conquest of a new identity.

A unicum that neither embraces luxury nor dislocation, no trendy attitude or too human pastimes.

There is only a strong desire to experiment, without limitations.

So, this is it, the behind-the-scenes of a vibrating greatness, which acts as a unifying vehicle.

For those of you who have not yet taste this «famous praline» or for those who had not done it sufficiently, on the first appointment of YEAH and LOOK WHERE IT GOT US!, here is another chance ready to offer you the new MonChéri in all its shades, as many as those of the works in exhibition. For the moment, and due to issues of suspense, we can only reveal name and ingredients but not the procedure or the quantity.

BIEN OU BIEN ?:

La liberté - celle de Max Stirner - ne peut être entière que si elle ne dérive ni ne dépend d'un privilège et résulte de sa propre conquête. Il en est de même pour les notions d'unicité et de propriété.

MonChéri en tant que propriété unique, dans ce cas, est constituée par un binôme: les Galeries Valentin et Jeanroch Dard. L'unicité en question ne souligne pas l'union même, déjà acquise, mais une force poursuivant ses propres critères de validité.

Les principes actifs de cette «nouvelle propriété» sont variés et inhabituels en raison de la sélection, et transversaux grâce aux corrélations entre les nombreuses œuvres exposées. Ces éléments visent à la conquête d'une nouvelle identité. Une expérience unique sans luxe ni luxation, en dehors de toute notion de mode ou de simple passe-temps, née d'un grand désir d'expérimenter, sans condition.

Voici les coulisses d'un spectacle commençant à s'animer, tel un instrument d'unification.

Pour ceux qui n'ont pas encore goûté au «célèbre chocolat» ou pour ceux qui n'y ont pas encore assez profité au cours du premier rendez-vous YEAH AND LOOK WHERE IT GOT US!, voici une autre occasion s'offrant à vous avec le nouveau MonChéri en de nouvelles déclinaisons, autant que celles des œuvres exposées. Pour le moment et pour une question de suspense nous pouvons seulement révéler le nom des ingrédients sans la recette ni les quantités.

11.06 - 31.07.2014

Vrijheid - volgens Max Stirner - kan niet volledig zijn als ze niet afgeleid is of afhankelijk is van een voorrecht en een gevolg is van haar eigen verovering. Dit geldt eveneens voor begrippen als uniciteit en eigendom.

MonChéri als unieke hoedanigheid, in dit geval, bestaat als een paar: de Galeries Valentin en Jeanroch Dard. Het unieke in kwestie benadrukt niet de unie zelf, die reeds verworven is, maar een kracht die zijn eigen geldigheidsvoorraarden nastreeft.

De werkzame bestanddelen van deze nieuwe hoedanigheid zijn gevarieerd en bijzonder omwille van de selectie van de verschillende tentoongestelde werken, en transversaal dankzij de correlaties tussen deze werken. Deze elementen zijn bedoeld om een nieuwe identiteit te veroveren. Een unieke ervaring, zonder luxe noch verstoring, zonder enige notie van mode of tijdverdrijf, ontstaat uit een grote zucht om te experimenteren zonder enige voorwaarden.

Ziehier de backstage van een spektakel dat tot leven begint te komen, als een instrument van de eenwording.

Voor diegenen die nog niet hebben geproefd van de «beroemde chocolade» of voor diegenen die niet genoeg hebben geprofiteerd tijdens de eerste afspraak YEAH AND LOOK WHERE IT GOT US!, dringt zich hier een andere mogelijkheid op met de nieuwe Moncheri in andere uitvoeringen, evenals de tentoongestelde werken. Om de spanning erin te houden kunnen we momenteel slechts de namen van de ingrediënten onthullen, zonder het recept noch de hoeveelheden.

BIEN OU BIEN ?

La libertà - quella di Max Stirner - per essere veramente tale, non può né derivare né dipendere da una concessione altrui, ma deve essere il frutto di una propria conquista. Così è esattamente anche per l'unicità e, infine, per la proprietà.

MonChéri: proprietà. L'unico, in questo caso, è costituito da un binomio: Galerie Valentin e Galerie Jeanroch Dard. L'unicità in questione non sottolinea l'unione stessa, già data per scontato, ma la forza dell'unione che persegue criteri propri di validità.

I principi attivi di questa «nuova proprietà» sono svariati e insoliti per via della selezione e obliqui per le fluide correlazioni che si sviluppano tra le molteplici opere in mostra. Questi elementi sono volti alla conquista di una nuova identità. Un unicum che non prevede né lusso né lussazione, nessun atteggiamento trendy né passatempi troppo umani.

C'è solo una grande voglia di sperimentare, incondizionatamente.

E' questo, dunque, il retroscena di una spettacolarità che inizia a vibrare e che è strumento di unificazione.

Per chi non avesse ancora gustato «il famoso cioccolatino» o per chi non lo avesse fatto abbastanza, durante il primo appuntamento YEAH and LOOK WHERE IT GOT US!, ecco un'altra occasione pronta ad offrirvi il nuovo MonChéri in più varianti, tante quante quelle delle opere in mostra. Per il momento e per questioni di suspense possiamo solo rivelarne nome e ingredienti ma non tecniche e quantità.

Gabriele Beveridge

Gabriele Beveridge is a London-based artist who creates two-dimensional and three-dimensional collages and installations using sun-faded images and a variety of natural and man-made objects. Through framing, balancing and propping, these disparate elements are brought into precisely constructed but open-ended dialogues. Materials such as sand, copper and marble rub up against the seductive sheen of cosmetics, suggesting poetic associations, psychological states, and a heightened awareness of the surfaces that surround us.

Beveridge (b.1985, Hong Kong) studied BA Photography at Falmouth College of Arts, and graduated with an MA in Fine Art Media from the Slade School of Fine Art in 2010. Her last solo exhibitions were organized at Elizabeth Dee, New York (2014), Zabludowicz Collection, London (2014), Outpost, Norwich (2013), Rod Barton, Rotterdam (2012).

Recent group exhibitions include Pre-Pop to Post-Human: Collage in the Digital Age, Hayward Touring, London (2014), Comrades of Time, Cell Project Space, London (2013), The Stand In (or A Glass of Milk), Public Fiction, Los Angeles (2013), Used Photocopier, HOTEL, London (2012), Journey Without a Map, Marion Scharmann Gallery, Cologne (2012).

Gabriele Beveridge crée des collages et des installations en deux et trois dimensions, à base d'images délavées par le soleil ainsi que divers objets naturels et artificiels. Grâce à des cadres soutenus en équilibre, ces éléments disparates sont engagés dans un dialogue à la fois ouvert et strictement délimité. Des matériaux tels que le sable, le cuivre et le marbre jouent des coudes contre la brillance séduisante des cosmétiques, évoquant des liens poétiques, des états psychologiques, et un niveau de perception élevé des surfaces qui nous entourent.

Beveridge (née en 1985, Hong Kong) a suivi ses études à Falmouth College of Arts, et Slade School of Fine Art. Ses dernières expositions personnelles ont été organisées chez Elizabeth Dee, New York (2014), Zabludowicz Collection, Londres (2014), Outpost, Norwich (2013), Rod Barton, Rotterdam (2012).

Aline Bouvy

Aline Bouvy's aesthetic investigations into various techniques such as collage, moulding or bronze casting generally revolve around the issue of taboos, mainly those related to the body. Freedom and questioning conventional decorum are at the core of this work, which does not intend to shock but to highlight desire in a living, transgressive way. Masquerading as kitsch incongruity, Bouvy's work features a range of figures of varying indecency, switching boldly between desire and repulsion.

As such, there is a vital connection between her work and the Figurative genre – or gender. Through a painstaking process, the artist collects and creates symbols linked to sexualisation, body orifices, as well as vague, suggestive shapes, substances, organs, neither fully identifiable nor utterly foreign.

Aline Bouvy (b.1974, Luxembourg) studied at Jan van Eyck Academie, Maastricht, and Ecole de Recherche Graphique, Brussels. Recent solo shows include : Espace d'Arts Plastiques Madeleine Lambert, Vénissieux (2014), NICC, Brussels (2013), Nosbaum & Reding, Luxembourg (2011), EMAF ArtBox, Osnabrück (2010), Edition Populaire, Antwerp (2010), Wendy Cooper Gallery, Chicago (2006), Palais des Beaux-Arts, Bruxelles (2006). Her work has been exhibited internationally at among others : Komplot, Mexico (2014), Karlin Studios, Prague (2013), Center for Contemporary Art, Rotterdam (2012), Le Commissariat, Paris (2012).

Les explorations esthétiques d'Aline Bouvy sur des techniques aussi diverses que le collage, le moulage ou la fonte de bronze ont généralement un point de départ unique : la question des tabous, principalement les tabous liés au corps. La liberté et le refus des convenances sont à la base de ce travail, qui n'a pas pour programme la provocation mais plutôt la mise en évidence vivante et transgressive du désir. Sous les allures du kitsch et de l'incongruité, le travail d'Aline Bouvy met en scène un éventail de figures plus ou moins indécentes, passant hardiment du désir à la répulsion. Son travail appartient donc de manière vitale au « genre » de la figuration. L'élaboration est lente, l'artiste collecte ou fabrique des signes, ceux de la sexuation, des orifices corporels, mais également des formes vagues et évocatrices, matières ou organes, ni tout à fait identifiables, ni tout à fait étrangères.

Aline Bouvy (née en 1974, Luxembourg) à suivi ses études à l' Academie Jan van Eyck, Maastricht, ainsi qu'à l'Ecole de Recherche Graphique, Bruxelles. Des expositions personnelles ont été organisées à l'Espace d'Arts Plastiques Madeleine Lambert, Vénissieux (2014), NICC, Bruxelles (2013), Nosbaum & Reding, Luxembourg (2011), EMAF ArtBox, Osnabrück (2010), l'Edition Populaire, Antwerp (2010), Wendy Cooper Gallery, Chicago (2006), Palais des Beaux-Arts, Bruxelles (2006). Son travail a fait exposé dans de nombreuses expositions collectives à l'international, Komplot, Mexico (2014), Karlin Studios, Prague (2013), Center for Contemporary Art, Rotterdam (2012), Le Commissariat, Paris (2012).

Hamishi Farah

Hamishi Farah is a grey identifying post Somali-Australian artist practicing in Melbourne. Painting as a platform to look @ & around the physicality of digital images in an accelerated and image saturated discourse. IRL art production and .jpg economy as out of sync AV leaving a physical object as ephemera. Microblogging going macro, a misstep into the poetics of digital space, 'the feed' or 'stream' as anthology. Hamishi is an approachable 6'1" and can be reached @hamishis. Hamishi also is a deft painter, and his internet-affixed musings on image saturation flirt with graphic art in painterly form. Google Chrome sofas, Skype armchairs, Homer Simpson, Photoshop canvases and, perhaps most fascinatingly, painted brush strokes. He brings the physical to the ephemeral, the ephemeral to the physical. In a world where our zeros and ones are increasingly intertwined with our tangible selves, Hamishi Farah's avant garde fantasies are probably more rooted in Realism than one may first thing.

Hamishi Farah (b.1991, Australia) has had since 2012 participated at several solo exhibitions at West Space (2014), Blackarprojects (2014), Paradise Hills Gallery (2012) in Melbourne. His work has been included in group shows for RMIT Design Hub, Melbourne (2014), Digital Art Biennale, São Paulo/Online (2013), Breeze Block Gallery, Portland (2012).

Hamishi Farah, artiste de Melbourne qui s'identifie comme métis post-somalien, fait appel à la peinture comme plate-forme pour observer et faire le tour de la qualité physique de l'image numérique au sein d'un discours accéléré et saturé d'images. La production hors-ligne couplée à l'économie du JPEG à la manière d'un flux audiovisuel désynchronisé laisse place à un objet physique éphémère. L'évolution du micro-blog vers le macro-blog, faux-pas vis-à-vis de la poésie de l'espace numérique, avec le « flux » ou le « flot » comme anthologie. Hamishi, 185 cm, facilement approchable, peut être contacté sur @hamishis.

Hamishi est par ailleurs un peintre dont les recherches en saturation de couleurs, exposées sur l'Internet, flirtent avec l'art graphique et les formes picturales : canapés Google Chrome, fauteuils Skype, toiles Photoshop ou Homer Simpson et, plus fascinant encore, d'authentiques coups de pinceaux. Il insuffle le physique dans l'éphémère, l'éphémère dans le physique. Dans un monde où nos données binaires sont de plus en plus enchevêtrées avec notre être, les fantasmes avant-garde de Farah sont sans doute plus ancrés dans le réalisme qu'on ne s'y attendrait.

Hamishi Farah (né en 1991 en Australie) a depuis 2012 participé à plusieurs expositions collectives : RMIT Design Hub, Melbourne (2014), Digital Art Biennale, São Paulo/Online (2013), Breeze Block Gallery, Portland (2012). Son travail a fait l'objet d'expositions personnelles au West Space (2014), Blackarprojects (2014) et Paradise Hills Gallery (2012) à Melbourne.

Mike Goldby

Mike Goldby investigates structures of trend, hype and branding. Trend has the power to define social and cultural codes that become normal (no matter how fleeting) and hype mobilizes desire to proliferate these trends. These levels of power can be exercised on any scale. In Stretch, the current western fashion trend of activewear, and it's simultaneous appropriation from and subsumption into streetwear is tested by reconfiguring and stretching these materials to a further point. Brands like Nike and Adidas have pervasive qualities and strength in individual identity construction and are folded into an individual's personal brand as raw material-stretch becomes an exercise in testing a trend or brand's strength in a newly configured form.

Recent solo shows include Jr. Projects and Tomorrow Gallery in Toronto. Mike Goldby has participated to several group exhibitions at Galleria Massimo De Luca, Venice (2014), Annarumma Gallery, Naples (2014), The Independent, New York (2014), Museum of Contemporary Canadian Art, Toronto (2012).

Mike Goldby étudie la manière dont se structurent les tendances, la médiatisation et les stratégies des marques. Une tendance est capable de définir des codes sociaux et culturels qui deviennent ensuite la norme (aussi éphémère soit-elle) tandis que la médiatisation mobilise le désir de proliférer cette tendance. Ces niveaux de pouvoir peuvent s'exercer quelle que soit l'échelle. Avec Stretch, la tendance actuelle dans les vêtements de sport – son appropriation depuis la mode streetwear et, simultanément, son affirmation au sein de celle-ci – est mise à l'épreuve à travers une reconfiguration et un étirement de ces matériaux au-delà de leur état nominal. Des marques telles que Nike ou Adidas possèdent des qualités de persuasion et une force au niveau de la construction de l'identité de l'individu qui sont enchevêtrées dans la marque personnelle de l'individu en tant que matériau brut. Stretch devient ainsi un exercice de mise à l'épreuve d'une tendance ou de la force d'une marque sous une forme nouvellement configurée.

Ses dernières expositions personnelles ont été organisées chez Jr. Projects et Tomorrow Gallery à Toronto. Mike Goldby a également participé à plusieurs expositions collectives à la Galleria Massimo De Luca, Venise (2014), Annarumma Gallery, Naples (2014), The Independent, New York (2014), Museum of Contemporary Canadian Art, Toronto (2012).

Mannor Grundwald

Manor Grunewald considers himself first and foremost as a painter, although he is also active in the fields of sculpture, installation and prints. His work is characterised by the constant analysis of the development of the pictorial in our daily environment. He finds and collects the sources of his images everywhere in daily life: in newspapers, advertising, books, comics, digital media and even illustrations of biological microcosms and macrocosms. His image archive serves as a source of inspiration, and his found pictorial material is often altered, partially on purpose and in some cases arbitrarily, by copying, enlarging or collaging. The artist thus creates new pictorial information, which is largely free of cognitively controlled processes and which reveal the unfamiliar, allowing this to become the content of his painting.

In these recent works, his painting is concerned with the optics, visual conformity, imperfection and arbitrariness of the phenomenon of the black-and-white copy. On the canvases are superficially dark colour gradients, which, like the "colour" produced by a black-and-white photocopy machine, oscillate between shades of black, grey, violet and dark blue. The artist also transfers onto his canvases the "blackening", distortion and layering of the photocopy process, which leads to colour stains and reflections.

Manor Grunewald (b. 1985, Germany), is fellow until 30 June 2014 in the International Studio and Curatorial Program (ISCP) in New York. Recent solo exhibitions include Heimat projectspace, Antwerp (2014), Chaplini gallery, Cologne (2013), Volta 9, Basel (2013), Highlight Gallery, San Francisco (2012). His work has been included in many group shows such as SuperDakota Gallery, Brussels (2014), Gallery Fortlaan 17, Ghent (2014), The White House Gallery, Leuven (2013), Hermitage Museum, Amsterdam (2011).

Manor Grundwald se considère avant tout comme peintre, même s'il intervient également dans les domaines de la sculpture, de l'installation et de l'estampe. Son travail se caractérise par une analyse continue du développement pictural dans notre environnement quotidien. Il collectionne des images dont les sources proviennent de tous les recoins de la vie quotidienne : journaux, publicités, livres, bandes dessinées, médias numériques, voire illustrations de microcosmes ou de macrocosmes biologiques. Son archive d'images lui sert de source d'inspiration, et sa matière première d'imagerie trouvée se retrouve souvent modifiée, parfois exprès, parfois de manière aléatoire, à travers la copie, l agrandissement ou le collage. L'artiste crée ainsi de nouvelles informations graphiques qui s'affranchissent dans la mesure du possible de toute démarche sujette à la cognition, révélant l'inconnu pour en faire le contenu de l'œuvre. Dans cette nouvelle série, sa peinture se penche sur l'optique, la conformité visuelle, l'imperfection et les phénomènes aléatoires de la copie noir et blanc. Sur la toile, des dégradés de teintes superficiellement sombres, à l'instar de la « couleur » obtenue par une photocopieuse noir et blanc, oscillent entre tons de noir, gris, violet et bleu foncé. L'artiste effectue par ailleurs des transferts sur toile du « noircissement », de la distorsion et des effets de couches liés au processus de photocopie, entraînant ainsi des taches et des reflets colorés.

Manor Grunewald (né en 1985, Allemagne), est boursier de l'International Studio and Curatorial Program (ISCP) de New York. Ses expositions personnelles récentes furent organisées à l'Heimat projectspace, Antwerp (2014), Chaplini gallery, Cologne (2013), Volta 9, Basel (2013), Highlight Gallery, San Francisco (2012). L'artiste a participé à de nombreuses expositions collectives, parmi lesquelles: SuperDakota Gallery, Bruxelles (2014), Gallery Fortlaan 17, Ghent (2014), The White House Gallery, Leuven (2013), Hermitage Museum, Amsterdam (2011).

Lucy Kim

Lucy Kim is an artist who plays games with images. The Korean-born and Massachusetts-based artist subjects referents of pop culture to forms of visual distortion. Likening her practice to a type of analogue Photoshop, she processes appropriated imagery with a keen sense of materiality, exploring how visual perception can be confounded. She often works against the latent qualities of a medium, and one can look towards the work Parrot Figurines (2014) as typical. Incorporating oil paint, aluminium foil and plastic, the almost sculptural treatment of the surface interferes with the viewer's ability to easily decipher the image. The creased surface dramatizes the relationship between what is represented and how it is made. Continuing with the bird motif, Kim has cast sculptures of parrots and ducks with latex, then painted and stretched the elasticated castings over stretcher bars. The resultant warping and pictorial repetitions act to camouflage the originating source to point of increasing abstraction. Viewers are asked to see two things simultaneously in Kim's work: method and content, while process and representation work against each other to disorient them. It is these formal slippages that create the compelling effect of a slapstick dysfunction. Kim has recently become represented by the New York gallery Lisa Cooley, who will be hosting her first solo exhibition in 2015.

Lucy Kim (b. 1979, Seoul), earned a BFA and a MFA in Painting from Yale University School of Art, New Haven and Rhode Island School of Design. Her work has been included in group shows at Lisa Cooley, New York (2014), Ortega y Gasset Projects, New York (2013), Wassaic Project, New York (2011) among others.

Lucy Kim joue avec les images. Née en Corée et installée dans le Massachusetts, elle applique à des éléments évocateurs de la culture populaire diverses formes de manipulation visuelle. À travers une démarche qu'elle qualifie de « Photoshop analogique », elle traite des images appropriées en témoignant d'un sens acéré de la matérialité et en explorant les manières dont on peut tromper la perception visuelle. Elle travaille souvent à l'encontre des qualités intrinsèques d'un support : on pourrait prendre son œuvre Parrot Figurines (2014) comme une référence dans ce domaine. En associant peinture à l'huile, feuilles d'aluminium et plastique, le traitement quasi-sculptural de la surface perturbe et complexifie toute tentative de déchiffrage de l'image par le spectateur. La surface froissée théâtralise le lien entre ce qui est représenté et la manière dont il est créé. En poursuivant sur le thème des oiseaux, Kim crée des moules en latex de sculptures de perroquets et de canards, avant de peindre et d'étirer ces cadres élastiques sur des châssis. Il en résulte une déformation et des répétitions de formes qui procèdent à camoufler la source originale au sein d'une abstraction croissante. Le spectateur est sommé de voir deux choses dans l'œuvre de Kim : la méthode et le contenu, alors que la démarche et la représentation travaillent l'une contre l'autre pour nous désorienter. Ce sont de tels glissements formels qui créent cet effet fascinant de dysfonctionnement grotesque. Kim est depuis peu représentée par la galerie new-yorkaise Lisa Cooley, qui accueillera sa première exposition personnelle en 2015.

Lucy Kim (née en 1979 à Séoul), est diplômée de Yale University School of Art, New Haven et de Rhode Island School of Design. Son travail a été exposé dans de nombreuses expositions collectives parmi lesquelles chez Lisa Cooley, New York (2014), Ortega y Gasset Projects, New York (2013), Wassaic Project, New York (2011).

Torben Ribe

In his recent series of paintings, Torben Ribe depicts what could be called «interior situations» – though they are the kind of interiors that we would happily put behind us. Sawdust wallpapers painted with a sponge in colours such as lime green, pink or baby blue are displayed together with the utilitarian necessities we'd rather not look at: wires, ventilators, wall sockets. What is being framed here are arrangements that most of us would pay money to hide, repair or even demolish. Moreover, it turns out that these domestic fragments all have an inherent problem resulting from shoddy construction work: in one painting, mould is about to destroy the wallpaper, in another, a slimy substance clings to the surface (maybe in an attempt to create further 'creative' effects, but a cloth on the wall shows that the effort was in vain). The paintings direct our attention towards the failed attempts of some anonymous «handyman» trying to solve a specific problem, but the solution ends up creating yet another problem to be solved.

Despite the fact that Ribe's paintings depict home improvements gone wrong, it is clear that a genuine craftsmanship has been put into each of them to make the failures look authentic. The result could have been somewhat stiff, because of his efforts to be accurate and precise in the failure-making, but there is actually a sort of underlying sympathetic humour in each of them.

Torben Ribe (b.1978, Denmark) received a diploma from The Royal Danish Academy of Fine Arts, Copenhagen. Recent solo exhibitions include Galerie Hussenot, Paris (2013), IMO, Copenhagen (2012). His work has been included in group shows at Elizabeth Dee, New York (2013), Den Frie Centre of Contemporary Art, Copenhagen (2012), Institute of Contemporary Art, Copenhagen (2011).

Avec cette nouvelle série de peintures, Torben Ribe met en scène des espaces que l'on pourrait qualifier d'intérieurs, mais d'un genre que l'on n'a pas forcément envie de regarder. Des papiers peints texturés, recouverts à l'éponge de teintes vert citron, rose ou bleu ciel, sont présentés aux côtés d'appareillages fonctionnels que l'on préférerait ignorer : câbles, ventilation, prises électriques. Des assemblages que l'on voudrait généralement cacher, réparer ou détruire sont ici sublimés. Or, ces fragments domestiques sont toujours affublés d'un problème inhérent qui résulte d'une construction bancale : dans un cas, la moisissure menace d'envahir le papier peint, dans un autre, une substance visqueuse colle à la surface (peut-être dans un effort de « créativité », mais le tissu au mur démontre que l'effort a été vain). Ces œuvres attirent notre attention sur les tentatives échouées d'un bricoleur inconnu, qui essaie de résoudre un problème, mais dont la solution donne lieu à un nouveau problème à résoudre.

Si ces œuvres de Ribe mettent en scène des rénovations domestiques qui ont mal tourné, il est évident qu'il a fait appel à un artisanat bien réel pour donner à ces expériences un semblant d'authenticité. Il aurait pu en résulter une certaine raideur due à l'effort de précision et de fidélité dans la création de ces échecs, mais on ressent au contraire une forme de sympathie teintée d'humour.

Amanda Ross-Ho

Amanda Ross-Ho's work is inspired by detritus: the clutter and remnants of daily existence, and the «negative space» of things overlooked. Ranging from sculpture, installation, painting, and photography, her work seeks to uncover the subtle beauty of coincidence and anomaly. Working from source material as diverse as newspaper articles, narcotics agency records, life aspiration manuals, and home-craft instruction booklets, Ross-Ho highlights points of cultural «intersection» to create extrinsic portraits of contemporary zeitgeist.

Throughout Ross-Ho's work is a sense of de-familiarisation and detachment, a numbing alienation contrived from everyday ephemera.

Amanda Ross-Ho (b.1975, Chicago) received a BFA from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and an MFA from the University of Southern California. Recent solo exhibitions include Mitchell-Innes & Nash, New York (2013), Museum of Contemporary Art, Chicago (2013), Museum of Contemporary Art, Los Angeles (2012), The Approach, London (2011), Cherry and Martin, Los Angeles (2010).

The artist participated to numerous international groupshows including the Orange County Museum of Art, Newport Beach (2012), The Journal, Brooklyn (2012), Museum of Contemporary Art, Los Angeles (2012), Rubell Family Collection, Miami (2010), Museum of Modern Art, New York (2010).

L'oeuvre d'Amanda Ross-Ho s'inspire des matériaux de rebut : l'encombrement et les restes de l'existence quotidienne et le «négatif» des choses survolées. Alliant la sculpture, l'installation, la peinture et la photographie, son travail cherche à découvrir la beauté subtile de la coïncidence et de l'anomalie. Travaillant des matières aussi diverses que des articles de journaux, manuels de développement personnel et de loisirs créatifs, Ross-Ho met en évidence des « carrefours » culturels pour créer des portraits inhérents à l'esprit contemporain.

Un sentiment de dé-familiarisation et de détachement, une aliénation anesthésiante artificielle de babioles de tous les jours, marque l'ensemble de son travail.

Amanda Ross-Ho (née en 1975, Chicago) a suivi ses études à l'Art Institute of Chicago et à l'University of Southern California. Ses dernières expositions personnelles ont été organisées chez Mitchell-Innes & Nash, New York (2013), Museum of Contemporary Art, Chicago (2013), Museum of Contemporary Art, Los Angeles (2012), The Approach, Londres (2011), Cherry and Martin, Los Angeles (2010).

Dominic Samsworth

Dominic Samsworth has just finished his period of residency at the Still House Group in New York. He is still very young, and almost unknown to the art scene, but his art practice seems to be already well focused and entrenched. In terms of methodology it basically consists of taking on the stage details, objects, places and people as fragments of an unsaid storytelling; however it is the formal frame in which this gesture takes place what really matters: a geometric, minimal and repetitive scheme apparently centered on the idea that isolation is the real essence of the art making. «Recently my work has shifted from architecture to a more domestic environment» he says, «same ideas, capturing things, delaying object preservation or fast forwarding an object destruction by working in a kind of reductive way». But obviously every «found object» implies researching, driven by a certain sentimental surrounding. Effectively Samsworth describes his practice as «a response to new places. I want to explore and go beyond the sort of physical and social boundaries. It is an exploration to see what is over the wall behind the facade».

Dominic Samsworth (b. 1987, Wiltshire, UK) studied at the Glasgow school of Art in Hereford. Since 2010, His work has been included in group shows at The Duchy Gallery, The Old Hairdressers and David Dale Gallery in Glasgow, The Still House Group, New York. A solo show of the artist as been organized recently at Jan Kaps gallery, Cologne.

Dominic Samsworth vient de terminer une résidence au Still House Group de New York. C'est un très jeune artiste, encore quasiment inconnu dans le milieu de l'art, mais dont la démarche semble déjà sérieuse et bien aboutie. Sa méthodologie consiste, pour résumer, à mettre en scène des détails, des objets, des lieux et des personnes en tant que fragments d'une narration inexprimée, mais dont l'importance réside dans le cadre formel où cette action se déroule : un programme géométrique, minimal, répétitif, apparemment centré sur la notion que l'isolement constitue l'essence véritable de la démarche artistique. Selon l'artiste, son travail s'est depuis peu détourné de l'architecture pour se concentrer sur un environnement plus domestique : « Il y a cette même notion d'appropriation de choses, de ralentir la préservation ou de précipiter la destruction d'objets, à travers une approche plus ou moins réductrice. » Évidemment, tout « objet trouvé » sous-entend des recherches teintées par un environnement quelque peu affectif. Et en effet, Samsworth décrit ses œuvres comme autant de « réactions à des lieux nouveaux. Je veux explorer, aller au-delà des barrières physiques ou sociales. C'est une exploration qui cherche à découvrir ce qui se cache de l'autre côté du mur, derrière la façade. »

Dominic Samsworth (née en 1987 à Wiltshire, UK), est diplômé de la Glasgow school of Art, Hereford. Depuis 2010, son travail a été exposé à la Duchy Gallery, The Old Hairdressers, David Dale Gallery à Glasgow, The Still House Group, New York. Une exposition personnelle lui a dernièrement été consacrée chez Jan Kaps à Cologne.

Featuring paintings that seamlessly combine attributes of analog and digital processes, Staniak creates the paintings mostly by hand—he builds up texture with uneven layers of plaster and then paints the surface in a range of ways—the paintings bear an uncanny resemblance to flat digital prints. Indeed, one must view the works up close to perceive any texture or depth, and as such, they behave like contemporary trompe l'oeil paintings that baffle the senses. Some paintings do however utilize digital methods of output and in so doing create a dialogue between the two modes of production.

These works explore a new aesthetic in painting, one which is influenced by digital technologies, including touch pads, smart phones, personal computing and the Internet. Technologies such as these are enabling a new kind of authorship, where everyone from the professional to the amateur image-maker has access to creative tools and viral methods of distribution. There the focus is not on the origin of an image or information about its creator, but rather, the focus is on the steady flow of content. Images are curated and recreated—they constantly evolve with seemingly no beginning or end. Easily appropriated or deleted, images on the Internet are now as much omnipresent as they are fleeting.

Michael Staniak (b.1982, Melbourne) earned a BFA and an MFA from the Victorian College of the Arts, Melbourne as well as a BA from Middle Tennessee State University. He has had solo exhibitions at Steve Turner, Los Angeles (2014), Blockprojects, Melbourne (2013) and Artereal Gallery, Sydney (2012). His work has been included in group shows at Horton Gallery (2013) and Charles Bank, New York (2013) and will be featured in a two person exhibition with Rafaël Rozendaal for Steve Turner Contemporary at Art Rio in September 2014.

Sous la forme de peintures qui associent harmonieusement des attributs propres à la fois au numérique et à l'analogique, Michael Staniak crée ses œuvres majoritairement à la main : il amasse de la texture grâce à des couches irrégulières de plâtre avant d'en peindre la surface avec diverses techniques, jusqu'à atteindre une ressemblance étonnante avec des tirages numériques sur support plat. En effet, le spectateur doit regarder de près pour déceler toute trace de texture ou de profondeur ; en ce sens, il s'agit de trompe-l'œil contemporains qui affolent les sens. Certaines de ses œuvres font néanmoins appel à des méthodes d'impression numérique, ouvrant ainsi un dialogue entre les deux modes de production.

Ces œuvres explorent une nouvelle forme esthétique dans la peinture, influencée par les technologies numériques, dont les écrans tactiles, le smartphone, l'ordinateur personnel ou l'Internet. Les technologies de ce type engendrent un modèle inédit de paternité de l'œuvre, où tout le monde, de l'amateur au professionnel de l'image, a accès à des outils créatifs et à des méthodes de diffusion « virales ». Dans ce domaine, l'importance ne repose pas sur l'origine d'une image ou sur les informations relatives à son créateur, mais plutôt sur la nature ininterrompue du flot de contenu. Les images sont sélectionnées, classées, recréées, en évolution constante, apparemment sans début ni fin. Aussi aisément appropriées qu'effacées, les images sur l'Internet sont aujourd'hui aussi omniprésentes qu'elles sont fuyantes.

Michael Staniak (né en 1982, Melbourne) a suivi ses études au Victorian College of the Arts, Melbourne et à Middle Tennessee State University. Des expositions personnelles ont dernièrement été organisées chez Steve Turner, Los Angeles (2014), Blockprojects, Melbourne (2013) et Artereal Gallery, Sydney (2012). Horton Gallery (2013) et Charles Bank, New York (2013) ont également présenté ses œuvres dans le cadre d'expositions collectives. Michael Staniak sera représenté dans un duo avec Rafaël Rozendaal pour Steve Turner Contemporary à Art Rio en septembre 2014.
